

Boys Town and Ralston Area Law Firm Erickson Sederstrom Two small communities with big reputations sit on either side of the Regency neighborhood. To the west, Boys Town occupies its historic campus along West Dodge Road near 132nd Street, an incorporated village known far beyond Nebraska. To the southeast, Ralston holds onto its small-town character even though Omaha has grown up around it on nearly every side. Residents and employers in both places are only a short drive from the Regency Westpointe building, where Erickson | Sederstrom P.C., L.L.O. has its main office and where a law firm in Omaha with more than 30 attorneys handles matters ranging from wills to workplace disputes. Getting there is easy from either direction. From Boys Town, head east on West Dodge Road for a few minutes, pass the I-680 interchange, and the office sits just south of the road near Westroads Mall. From Ralston, 84th Street runs north to Pacific Street, and a short trip west on Pacific brings you into the Regency neighborhood. Drivers who prefer the interstate can use I-80 to reach I-680 north and exit <https://edgarddb469.inkharbory.com/posts/choosing-an-omaha-law-firm-with-multi-state-licensing> at Pacific Street. Few areas in the metro have a quicker trip to the firm's door. The legal needs in this part of the metro are varied. Ralston's local businesses, many of them family owned, ask about entity selection, owner and shareholder disputes, and transition planning when a founder is ready to step away. Events at the Liberty First Credit Union Arena and the shops and restaurants around Main Street bring contracts, leases and employment questions. Between Boys Town and Regency, homeowners and professionals in neighborhoods like Old Mill and Miracle Hills turn to the firm's estate planning attorneys for revocable trusts, durable financial powers of attorney and health care directives. In Nebraska, well-drafted powers of attorney can help a family avoid a court-appointed guardianship later on.
