Plenty of companies claim to stand behind their work. Fewer can point to a promise that has lasted more than four decades. When Mary Jane Wszolek started The Happy Housekeepers in the Roanoke Valley in 1979, she built the business on a simple idea: satisfaction guaranteed. That idea is still at the heart of this Roanoke cleaning service today.

A Promise Made in 1979

In practice, satisfaction guaranteed means the job is not finished until you are happy with it. If something is missed, the office will make it right. The company's about page describes personalized attention that begins with your first phone call and continues with a follow-up call after the initial cleaning. That call is not a formality. It is how the team learns what matters to you and adjusts future visits to match.

The guarantee is backed by a thorough standard routine. Furniture is dusted and polished, carpets are vacuumed, hard floors are mopped, kitchens and bathrooms receive a full cleanup, and window sills, baseboards, blinds and ceiling fans are dusted. Trash is emptied and cobwebs are cleared. When everyone knows exactly what should be done, it is much easier to deliver consistently and to fix anything that slips.

The Happy Housekeepers | 5145 Starkey Rd, Roanoke, VA 24018 | (540) 774-4299

Mary Jane passed away suddenly in 1999, but the family company kept her work ethic alive. Today the business is led by President Paula Anderson and remains locally owned and operated from Starkey Road in southwest Roanoke County. Its long record speaks for itself: BBB accreditation since December 1993, an A+ BBB rating, and decades of loyal clients across Roanoke, Salem, Vinton, Hollins and Roanoke County.

The guarantee extends to commercial clients too. Through the Corporate Clean division, created in 1986, businesses receive customized janitorial plans with a supervisor always on call. If an office manager has a concern, there is Roanoke cleaning service someone ready to respond. Employees are trained by the company, and all chemicals and equipment are supplied.

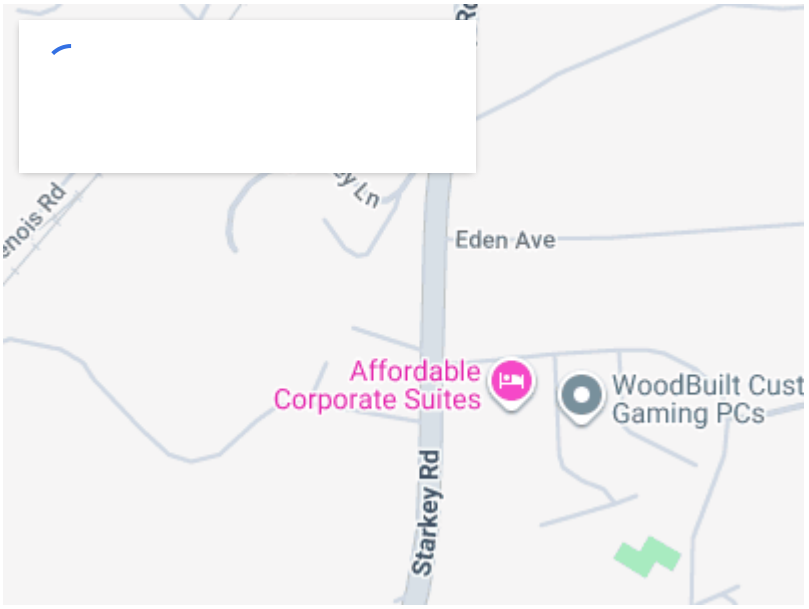

Customer reviews on the company website reflect the same commitment, mentioning managers who follow up personally, crews that handle special requests and service that has stayed consistent over many years. That kind of loyalty does not happen by accident. It happens when a company treats every client's satisfaction as its own responsibility.

A guarantee only means something if a company sticks around long enough to honor it. Cleaning businesses come and go, and a promise from a company that may not exist next year is worth very little. More than forty years of continuous local service is the strongest evidence that The Happy Housekeepers keeps its word, because a business that did not would never have lasted this long in a valley where word of mouth travels fast.
