A Simple Decorating Plan

Make a list of every item that needs to be placed, assign each task to a specific person and pack everything by area: ceremony, porch, tables, cake and dessert, and dressing rooms. Label your boxes clearly so helpers can work without asking questions. If you are bringing in a florist or rental company, share the timeline with the family so everyone knows when deliveries will arrive at the farm.

Cleanup deserves its own plan too. Decide who will collect personal items, gifts and leftover decor at the end of the night, and who will return any rentals. When the venue helps with cleanup, as reviewers have described, you can leave the farm focused on the memories rather than the mess. Couples from Daleville and Cloverdale who live nearby can also pick up remaining items the next day if that is arranged in advance.

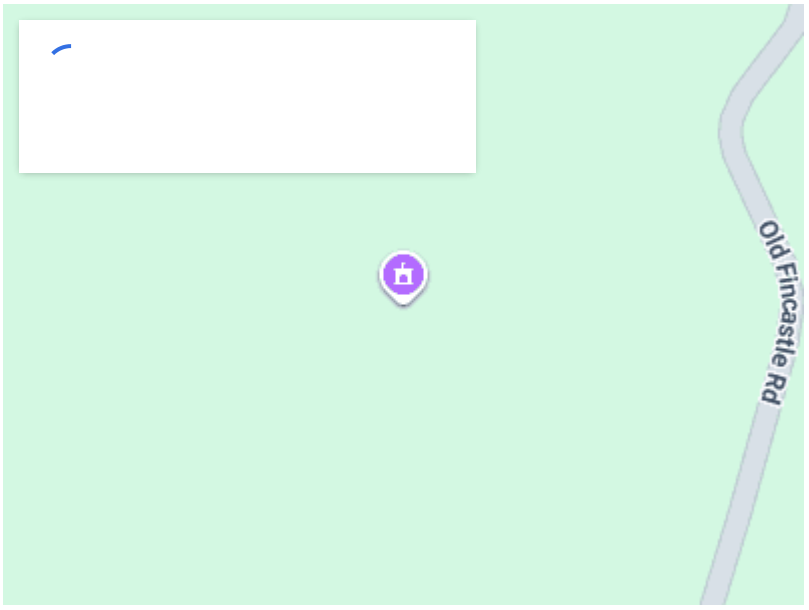

Couples planning from Troutville or Buchanan often find it helpful to do a dry run a few weeks before the wedding. Bring a sample centerpiece, check how your signs look against the barn walls and measure the spaces where you plan to hang lights or drape fabric. A short visit like this answers a lot of questions early and keeps the wedding week focused on finishing touches instead of guesswork.
