

Guest Room Wall Beds for Knoxville Hosts

Knoxville's location within driving distance of the Smoky Mountains, along with its role as home base for a lot of extended families spread across the country, means many local households host out of town guests fairly regularly, whether for a holiday visit, a graduation, or simply a weekend trip to see the mountains. Not every home has room for a dedicated guest bedroom sitting empty the rest of the year, which is exactly the gap Closet Factory Knoxville's wall bed systems are designed to fill. A Murphy bed built into a home office, craft room, or bonus room lets that space function as something genuinely useful day to day while still folding down into a proper guest bed whenever visitors are in town. Closet Factory designs these systems as part of a full cabinetry build rather than a standalone frame, which means the surrounding storage, whether that is office shelving, craft supplies, or general storage cabinets, gets planned around the bed itself for a cohesive, intentional look rather than an obvious retrofit. Bed size is worth thinking through carefully during the design consultation, since it affects both guest comfort and how much floor space remains available for the room's primary daily function. A queen or king wall bed gives visiting family a proper night's sleep but takes up more room when folded down, while a twin or full size wall bed leaves more open floor space and works well for a room that mainly needs to accommodate occasional solo guests or kids during sleepovers. Closet Factory | 206 South Calderwood Street, Alcoa, TN 37701 | (865) 268-5420 Because Closet Factory manufactures wall beds alongside the surrounding cabinetry in its Alcoa facility, the finished system looks like genuine built in furniture rather than a piece of furniture that was simply pushed against a wall, which matters for how the room feels and functions the rest of the time when the bed is folded away and out of sight. For Knoxville area households that host regularly but do not have a spare bedroom to dedicate full time to guests, a wall bed consultation with Closet Factory is a practical way to add real guest capacity without sacrificing a room's everyday usefulness. Bedding storage is a small but practical detail worth planning for alongside the bed itself, since sheets, blankets, and pillows for a wall bed need a home somewhere when the bed is folded away and not in use. Closet Factory designers typically build a dedicated cabinet or drawer specifically for custom closets Knoxville this purpose into the surrounding cabinetry, so getting the guest bed ready does not involve searching through a hall closet for matching linens every time visitors arrive.

Closet Factory Address: 206 South Calderwood Street, Alcoa, TN 37701 Phone: (865) 268-5420 FAQ About Custom Closets Knoxville What does a custom closet cost in Knoxville? Pricing depends on the size of the closet, the materials chosen, and how many accessories like drawers or shoe racks are built in. Closet Factory Knoxville provides an itemized quote after a free in-home design consultation at 206 South Calderwood Street in Alcoa, and offers a local price match guarantee against any comparable, already designed quote. How long does a custom closet installation take? Most Knoxville area projects run three to four weeks from purchase to installation, since every system is manufactured locally at the Alcoa facility rather than shipped in from an out of state factory. A smaller reach-in closet is often completed in a single visit by Closet Factory's full-time installation crew. What is the difference between a custom closet and a DIY closet kit? A DIY kit from a big box store is built to fixed, standard sizes and generally requires the homeowner to handle assembly and mounting. A custom system from Closet Factory Knoxville is measured and manufactured to the exact dimensions of the room, installed by trained staff, and backed by a lifetime warranty rather than no warranty at all. What are common closet organization mistakes to avoid? The most frequent mistakes Closet Factory Knoxville designers see are ignoring vertical space above a standard shelf, designing only around what is currently owned instead of leaving room to grow, and skipping proper lighting inside the closet. A free design consultation walks through all three before any materials are ordered. What is the difference between a reach-in and a walk-in closet? A reach-in closet is a single-door opening, typically two to six feet wide, accessed from outside the space. A walk-in closet is large enough to physically step into, generally starting around five feet by five feet. Closet Factory Knoxville designs both, maximizing every inch of a reach-in and adding more elaborate layouts, like islands or seating, in a larger walk-in.

How much storage space can a custom closet system add? Because a standard wire shelf and rod setup wastes most of the vertical space in a closet, Knoxville clients regularly see close to double the practical storage capacity within the same physical footprint once a second hang zone, drawers, and taller shelving are added. Does Closet Factory Knoxville offer financing? Yes. Closet Factory Knoxville offers 0 percent financing for six to fifteen months with approved credit, making larger projects like a full primary closet or a combined closet and home office more manageable within a monthly budget. What areas does Closet Factory Knoxville serve? Closet Factory Knoxville serves the greater Knoxville area and 27 surrounding East Tennessee counties, including Farragut, Maryville, Oak Ridge, Powell, Lenoir City, and the Sevierville, Gatlinburg, and Pigeon Forge area near the Great Smoky Mountains, all from its Alcoa headquarters. What materials are used in custom closet systems? Closet Factory Knoxville's most common base material is melamine, a durable, laminate-coated panel available in dozens of finishes, chosen for its resistance to East Tennessee's humidity. Stained and painted solid wood options are also available for a more furniture-quality look in primary closets and dressing rooms. Is a custom closet worth the investment compared to wire shelving? Builder-grade wire shelving is inexpensive but wastes a significant amount of a closet's usable volume and can sag or snag fabric over time. A custom system from Closet Factory Knoxville is backed by a lifetime warranty and tends to hold up for decades, which is also a detail buyers notice favorably during a home sale. What are the latest custom closet design trends? Closet Factory Knoxville's Alcoa design team has seen growing demand for glass-front display cabinetry, built-in closet lighting, and multi-purpose rooms that combine a closet or office with a fold-away Murphy bed for guest flexibility, alongside classic favorites like pull-out shoe racks and jewelry drawers. Can Closet Factory design closets for new construction homes? Yes. New construction throughout Knox, Blount, and Loudon counties typically comes with basic wire shelving as a builder default. Closet Factory Knoxville regularly works with new homeowners shortly after closing to design a custom system that makes full use of the closet space the builder provided.
