

Malaysia Releases 2027 School Term Dates for National and State Schools

The Ministry of Education has confirmed the 2027 school term dates for all government and government-aided schools across Malaysia. The calendar divides the academic year into three main terms, with variations for state schools that observe regional holidays. The schedule applies to primary and secondary schools under the national curriculum, covering approximately 10,000 institutions nationwide.

Under the standard calendar, the first term of 2027 begins in early March and runs through early June. The second term starts in mid-June and continues until early September. The third term opens in late September and closes in late November or early December, depending on the state grouping. These dates align with the typical structure set by the Ministry, allowing families and educators to plan well ahead.

Key Dates for Group A and Group B States

Malaysia groups its states into two clusters based on the observance of the Hari Raya Aidilfitri and Chinese New Year holidays. Group A includes Johor, Kedah, Kelantan, and Terengganu. Group B covers the remaining states and the Federal Territories. The 2027 school term dates differ slightly between these groups, mainly at the start and end of each term.

For Group A, the first term begins in mid-March and ends in early June. The second term runs from late June to mid-September. The third term starts in early October and finishes in late November. For Group B, the first term opens in early March and closes in late May. The second term goes from mid-June to early September. The third term starts in late September and ends in mid-December. The differences ensure that school holidays coincide with major festivals in each region.

Mid-term Breaks and Public Holidays

Each term includes a one-week mid-term break. In the first term, the break typically falls in late April or early May. The second term break occurs in late August or early September. The third term break comes in November. These breaks give students and teachers a pause before the final stretch of the academic year.

Public holidays also affect the calendar. Schools close for all gazetted federal and state holidays, which can shift term start and end dates slightly. For instance, the Chinese New Year holiday in 2027 falls in early February, before the first term begins. The Hari Raya Aidilfitri holiday is expected in late April, overlapping with the first term mid-term break. The Deepavali holiday will be observed in October, during the third term. Schools adjust their schedules to accommodate these national celebrations without shortening the required 190 school days per year.

State School Variations

State schools in Johor, Kedah, Kelantan, and Terengganu follow the Group A calendar. Schools in other states and the Federal Territories adhere to Group B. The Ministry of Education publishes separate calendars for each group on its official portal. Parents and teachers should verify which group applies to their school, as the dates can differ by up to two weeks at the start and end of the year.

The 2027 school term dates also account for the annual Sultan of the state holidays, which vary by region. In Kedah, for example, the school term may start a day later to accommodate the Sultan's birthday. In Johor, the school break for the Sultan's birthday is already built into the calendar. These local adjustments are standard practice and do not affect the overall term structure.

Impact on Families and School Planning

Knowing the 2027 school term dates well in advance helps families schedule vacations, medical appointments, and other commitments. The Ministry encourages parents to refer to the official calendar when planning trips, as school holidays are fixed except for last-minute changes due to unforeseen circumstances. Schools also use the dates to set examination periods, co-curricular activities, and parent-teacher meetings.

The Ministry of Education typically releases the full school calendar for the following year by mid-year. For 2027, the calendar was published in late 2026, giving families and schools more than a year to prepare. This advance notice is especially useful for families with children transitioning between primary and secondary school, as the term dates affect orientation weeks and registration periods.

State Groupings by the Ministry of Education

The Ministry of Education groups states into two categories to harmonize school holidays with regional festivals. Group A states observe a slightly later start to the academic year to accommodate the Hari Raya Aidilfitri holiday, which often falls in the first term. Group B states start earlier and finish later, balancing the Chinese New Year holiday that occurs in January or February.

The groupings are based on the predominant religious and cultural practices in each state. For example, Kelantan and Terengganu have a majority Muslim population, so the school calendar aligns with Islamic holidays. Sarawak and Sabah have different holiday patterns due to local festivals like Gawai and Kaamatan, but they generally follow the Group B calendar with minor adjustments. The Ministry reviews the groupings periodically to ensure they remain relevant.

The 2027 school term dates are part of a broader effort by the Ministry to standardize the academic calendar while respecting regional diversity. In recent years, the Ministry has moved to reduce the number of calendar variations, aiming for a more uniform school year across the country. However, the two-group system remains in place for 2027, as it balances the needs of different communities without disrupting the overall education system.

Preparing for the 2027 Academic Year

Schools across Malaysia will begin enrollment for the 2027 academic year in late 2026. Parents should check with their child's school for specific term dates, especially if the child attends a private or international school that may follow a different calendar. The Ministry of Education calendar applies only to government and government-aided schools, though many private schools align with it for convenience.

The Ministry also provides a downloadable PDF of the 2027 school calendar on its website. The document includes all term dates, mid-term breaks, public holidays, and state-specific adjustments. Parents and teachers can use this as a reference throughout the year. The Ministry reminds the public that the calendar is subject to change only in exceptional circumstances, such as natural disasters or public health emergencies.
