Mediation  Arbitration
	A Mediator does not impose a solution; he or she is a neutral third party, who is independent from the parties, but has been appointed by them as a mutually acceptable person to assist them seek mutually beneficial solutions to the disputed issues.	An Arbitrator or the arbitral tribunal is the third party to the arbitral proceedings, acting in essence like a court would: examining the evidence and issuing a decision at the end of the proceedings – a final arbitral award which is binding on the parties.
Confidentiality	Those involved in the mediation process are legally required to maintain confidentiality. The mediator shall not disclose the either party any information shared with him or her in private caucus with the other party. Exceptions to mediation confidentiality: only upon parties' consent, for enforcement of the final agreement.	Confidentiality is guaranteed under the EODID Arbitration Rules and the arbitration agreement between the parties. Exceptions to confidentiality: upon parties' consent, in case of recourse to the courts seeking to cure a defect of the arbitral proceedings, for enforcement of the arbitral award.
Duration	A few days.	A few months.
Cost	The most cost-effective alternative dispute resolution process, considerably less expensive than litigation.	Attractive pricing in comparison with litigation, subject to the value of the claim.
Attendance of the parties	Usually in person, with the support of their legal counsel whose presence may be optional or mandatory, depending on the applicable law.	The proceedings are monitored by the parties' lawyers. Parties may participate occasionally, as the case may require.
Opting out	Parties are free to leave the mediation process at any time.	Parties are not allowed to abandon the arbitration proceedings.
Resolution consists in...	Reconciliation of party proposals with the assistance of the Mediator; acceptance by both parties of a mutually beneficial agreement.	An arbitral award evaluating and balancing the legal submissions of the parties.
Final Decision	A binding agreement and an enforceable title to ensure compliance.	An arbitral award with the validity of a court judgment.
Appointment of Neutral(s)	A person acceptable to both parties, selection among a long list of Mediators.	Either an arbitrator mutually appointed by the parties (sole arbitrator) or an arbitrator appointed by each party and a third arbitrator (chair of the tribunal).
